Careers for civil engineering technicians featured in Just the Job

InfraTrain New Zealand has partnered Opus International Consultants to promote careers for civil engineering technicians in the latest series of Just the Job.

The popular show, currently screening on TV2, gives secondary school students a chance to find out about careers in a range of different industries. Students visit companies to gain some hands-on work experience and learn about opportunities for gaining skills and qualifications through industry training.

The civil engineering technician episode will air on Saturday 31 July. It follows Lisa Tatafu Puloka, of Auckland Girls Grammar School, as she spends a day with Opus International Consultants.

As well as providing an insight into the role of a civil engineering technician, the feature highlights the Opus cadetship programme. It also includes information about the qualification pathway to registration as a certified engineering technician with IPENZ.

Filming was carried out at locations across Auckland including Opus International Consultants Westhaven office, and project sites including the Western Motorway Extension Project and Manukau Railway Station.

Every school in New Zealand will receive a DVD copy of the entire series of Just the Job. In addition, InfraTrain has free copies of the civil engineering technician feature to give away. The DVD is a useful careers resource, which can be used at expos and events. To get your free copy email andrew@infratrains.co.nz
